Individual Coaching - Termination

Explanation of Individual Project

An important part of being a strong leader is demonstrating the ability to engage your workplace to move toward a common goal. During this nine-month program, participants will be asked to select a project with their supervisor that they will work on as an individual. We encourage participants to choose a project that benefits their company and will engage others in their workplace. For instance, they may choose to serve as their organization's United Way chairperson, organize a blood drive at their office, serve as the head of an ad-hoc committee and form a team to address a workplace problem, create a safety program, or spearhead an effort to improve a company process/system. You will also focus on your personal and professional development as a result of your 360° Assessment and participation in the Leadership Institute.

After a project is chosen, participants will be asked to outline the challenge they addressed, the strategies they chose to overcome it, the action steps they took and a timeline they will use to keep the project moving forward to ensure they are finished by the Institute's final session. They will be given more detailed instructions about this plan in the second session and will be provided with a template to use. The coach can help participants brainstorm ideas for implementing the project if they find they need help.

At the final session of the Leadership Institute, participants will be asked to give an oral presentation about their project and the accomplishments they made. We estimate each participant will have about

Executive Coaching Description

Coaching as part of the Leadership Institute will entail participants meeting with their executive coach for nine individual sessions that will take place in between monthly sessions. Each participant and their coach will agree on homework assignments that pertain to that individual's personal growth and addresses the feedback given in their 360° assessment.

Coaching generally proceeds through the following phases:

• Phase I – Intake: This phase lasts for one meeting and consists of gathering the following information:

a. A list of the biggest challenges the person faces

b. The participant's history. This is an important tool to help participants understand what changes they must consider making in order to achieve their goals.

c. Goals for coaching.

• Phase II – Gaining Insight: During this phase, the coach will work diligently to help participants understand how their reactive tendencies are actually creating the challenges they listed in Phase I. The insights gained in this phase create tremendous leverage to help participants change behaviors and acquire new behaviors necessary to achieve their goals.

• Phase III – Transformation: During this phase the ILS coaches will work with participants to help them achieve their goals. They will do this in two ways: By helping participants identify the beliefs that are holding them back and by partnering with them to develop homework assignments to destroy old reactive beliefs and transform them into new beliefs that create sustainable leadership for them and their organization. Coaches will help participants integrate their thoughts, emotions and behaviors so that they become a more authentic leader who never allows their environment to determine their results. As an authentic leader, participants become the architect of the successful future they deserve.

• Phase IV – Perpetuation: Participants will work to reinforce authentic habits. This phase ensures that the changes they have worked so hard to achieve will last a lifetime. If participants miss only one or two Institute sessions, they will receive a certificate of completion. All participants will be offered the opportunity to continue executive coaching if their supervisor/company approves the investment. If participants decide not to continue with executive coaching following the conclusion of the Leadership Institute, they will work on their own to solidify the gains they have made in Phase III.

"Leadership is not about who is following. It is about being completely and authentically yourself in service of your fellow man." - Steven L. Anderson, Ph.D., M.B.A.

360° Assessment Description

Each participant's transformational journey is enhanced by the powerful insight provided by a 360° assessment and the professional de-briefing by one of our 360°-certified executive coaches. The Leadership Circle Profile<sup>TM</sup> (TLCP) is setting a new standard for leadership assessment and feedback.

Here is why:

- Most surveys are a laundry list of behaviors. TLCP integrates well-researched leadership competencies into a unified framework.
- Most surveys merely report high and low scores. TLCP framework shows leaders how they are doing and spotlights the hidden motivators that drive successful and unsuccessful behaviors.
- Most surveys overwhelm leaders with a lot of un-integrated data. Using TLCP, leaders can quickly see the whole story and gain insights into their creative strengths, the competencies that need to be developed, and the deeper issues that need to be addressed to be more effective leaders.

In addition to their personalized report, participants will receive a TLCP assessment binder filled with comprehensive information about how they can improve upon the scores they receive on their TLCP. Undertaking this process will help participants understand how they are currently reacting to situations and design a plan to help them become more influential leaders.
